INFORMATION FURNISHED.

[illegible]

A correspondent of the Miner's Journal, Pottsville, Pa., writing from the neighborhood of Chattanooga, enters into a labored estimate to show that pig iron can be manufactured there at $16.95, or about $12 less than in Pennsylvania, and can be delivered in Nashville for $20 per ton, or $10.50 per ton less than the cost at Pittsburgh. He predicts that East Tennessee and Northern Georgia and Alabama will in time become the Wales of the American iron trade. There is, doubtless, some truth in these figures; but, before iron can be very successfully made in those regions, we must, by resumption of specie payments, make it more profitable to produce new values than to bet on the fluctuations of those now existing; we must greatly reduce taxation, and thereby the cost of production; and we must, in estimating the cost of production, include, as this correspondent does not, the cost of transporting his iron to a market where it can all find sale—a cost that must in all cases be borne by the producer. Including the cost of getting the pig iron to some central market where it can find general sale, which can only be where it is manufactured into the various purposes for which iron is used, it will be found that the total cost of Georgia pig metal will [illegible] up to that of the present iron-producing States. But, in the future, when rolling mills, foundries, and stove foundries are so multiplied in Georgia as to afford a near market for the pig iron they may produce, we doubt not the sanguine predictions of the correspondent may be verified.

Henry Clay Dean is known to the country as the great unwashed Democratic orator of Iowa. He was once a preacher, and in the days of Democratic ascendancy was Chaplain to the United States Senate. That body, however, soon tired of him, and he returned to the more congenial haunts of the Iowa Democracy. Since then he has followed the business of "itinerant orator," hiring himself out to whoever would pay him. The Democracy of Connecticut were badly sold, in the spring of 1868, by hiring Dean to stump that State. The Democracy of Illinois once tried him, but got rid of him in a few weeks. It was recently announced that Henry Clay Dean and John A. Kasson would meet at a number of places in Iowa and address joint meetings of Republicans and Democrats. The first meeting took place, but Dean was not present. His published explanation is thus stated by a correspondent:

[illegible]

Dean is a repudiator; but it is because of his frank avowal that he is such, and not because of the fact, that the Democratic [illegible] The hypocrisy of Pendleton [illegible] That is the reason why Dean is put down as a five-dollar man, and is not rated as a fifty-dollar orator. Sam Cary, of Ohio, gets seventy-five dollars a speech.

Although Secretary Boutwell is not omnipotent, he knows one disability in common with omnipotence, viz.: that, however truthful a revelation he may impart to the world, he cannot prevent the infidel editors of Democratic newspapers from denying its truth. The Cincinnati Enquirer asserts that the debt, instead of being decreased since the first of March by $[illegible],187.96, has been increased by $4,495,143.35, because, it says, the bonds issued to the Pacific Railroad, now amounting to $61,[illegible],331.25, were included in Mr. McCulloch's statement, and are excluded from Mr. Boutwell's. The Enquirer knows better. Though the statements are made up differently, both contain the footings of the public debt exclusive and inclusive of the Pacific Railway bonds, and also of the cash in the Treasury. Any person comparing the same footings, in the reports of the 1st March and 1st October, will find a reduction of about sixty millions, whether he includes the Pacific Railroad bonds and cash in the Treasury or excludes them. Does it quite pay for a journal claiming to be respectable to make such an assertion, knowing it to be untrue? Have not even most of the Democrats of Ohio intelligence enough to assume that it is false?

Just now the press of the country, in commenting upon the manner in which a fraudulent divorce was secretly obtained in the Nichols case in New York, are running over with demands that the proceedings in all litigated suits, and especially in divorce cases, shall be public and published. Pretty soon a prurient and nasty divorce case will be spread, in all its details, before the public, and then the same goody and eager moralists, so ready to make laws, human and divine, for governing the world, will cry: "No more of this! Why must the public taste be nauseated and morality undermined by the publication of these indecent details? If divorces must be granted, let them be private, like medical consultations and criminal executions. Let not the columns of the daily press be loaded with the moral slime of the world." It would be well if the two parties could get each other by the ears and argue this question out. But as they are only one and the same party, in its different moods and tenses, they go on demanding, in the interests of morality, that all divorce cases be published, and that all their facts be suppressed, and upbraiding the complicity of the newspaper with evil because their demands are not complied with.

The Sun has some correspondents, compared with whom Gulliver and Baron Munchausen had no taste or capacity for exaggeration. Mr. James Fisk, Jr., and his clerks have come to the aid of these [illegible] of the Sun with the view of proving that President Grant has a brother-in-law in New York who was willing to try to make money in Wall street by inducing Fisk and others to believe that he held the key to the President's influence, and would use it in their favor. Those who, with President Grant's history before them, can pay a very high price for the influence of his brother-in-law, deserve to be swindled as the Bull clique was, by Grant's own orders. And if the brother-in-law is involved in the same ruin, the country will be happy, and we do not believe the President, in his official capacity, will grieve, however much he may sympathize in his private relation as a brother-in-law.

The examination into the affairs of the Albert (Life) Insurance Company, of London, results even worse than had been predicted. Its supposed "reserve" of [illegible] fades away into various unsubstantialities, until nothing tangible is left save the [illegible] cash in hand, upon which the officers of the company were feeding, in salaries, commissions, and perquisites, when the company exploded. As the Albert was an aggregate resulting from the amalgamation, of various lines, of twenty-one other companies, its one failure is really the total failure of twenty-two companies. [illegible]

TUESDAY EVENING, Oct. 5.

Money continues to work more stringent as the continued accumulation of grain here gradually locks up the capital of the dealers, as well as all they can borrow of their bankers.

Exchange was higher to-day, and sold between banks at from 50c to 50c per $1,000 premium. This we have the anomaly of overflowing bins of grain, not only here in the city, but everywhere in the Northwest, and holders of it not unwilling to sell, Eastern indebtedness to be paid off, and yet, with all these circumstances favoring an active and healthy fall trade, exchange on New York at 50c per $1,000 premium, and currency being shipped to New York, instead of grain, to pay off Eastern debts. To their customers at the counter bankers now sell New York funds at 1-10 premium. Rates for taking bills are: New York 1-10 discount; Boston demand, 1-10 discount; Boston sight, 1-8 discount; Buffalo, ¼ discount; Montreal demand, ¼ discount.

The following table gives dealers quotations for buying and selling government bonds, local stocks, gold and silver in this market this afternoon:
